

Giant statue of golden Buddha in capital city Thimphu.

Me and Zuzana Daubnerová (also from Palackého University) with our colleagues from Bhutan Centre for Media and Democracy on the trip to nunnery Sangchhen Dorji Lhuendrup (behind us).

The view on the valley, in which is located the capital of Bhutan (Thimphu), lies in altitude 2350 metres.

The second oldest (beautiful) dzong in Bhutan, Punakha.

View on the Himalayas from the plane.

Another uniqueness of Bhutan is the number of street dogs, that you usually meet near shops and restaurants from which they receive leftovers.

Temples can be in Bhutan sometimes seen on cliffs or in the rocks. Tiger's nest is the most famous one. This temple was built around the cave where meditated Guru Rinpoche, a master who came here from India in the 8th century and conquered evil spirits.
